Legs Self-Lymphatic Drainage

This leaflet provides information to help you understand how to carry out simple lymphatic drainage on your legs.

If you would like additional information or have any questions, please contact the Lymphoedema Service on 01484 343817.

Simple Lymphatic drainage

Simple Lymphatic drainage is a massage technique that helps move congested fluid to areas of working lymph nodes. Always work upwards, towards the area of working lymph nodes. Apply a small amount of pressure and ensure skin to skin contact. Stretch the skin slightly as you massage but this should not cause pain or redness. This will ensure effective drainage. Do not use oils or cream.

Step 1

Start with deep breathing (x 5). Slowly extend your arms out, breath in through your nose and hold for 2 seconds. Slowly release your arms across the chest and breath out through your nose.

Step 2

Empty the lymph nodes (x 4) at the groin (both sides). Apply little pressure and stretch the skin downwards or use a soft ball (squeezing x 4).

Step 3

From the groin, clear on both sides up towards the hip and abdomen x2.

Repeat step 2.

Step 4

Clear with a flush if no oedema x 2 (like step 3). Otherwise divide the leg into approx. 3 quadrants (as pictured). Starting at the top of the leg (thigh), work on the areas of oedema (fluid) using the palms of the hands, taking each quadrant in turn & softening, repeating step 2 & 3 before moving onto the next section (see picture).

Encourage the oedema towards the chest and axilla on the unaffected side. Repeat step 2.

Spend at least 30mins repeating the steps outlined above and do this at least twice a day.

Step 5

Upon reaching the knee, empty the lymph nodes at the back of the knees.

Step 6

Repeat step 4 flushing all the way back up the starting point. Repeat step 3 and then 2.

Step 7

Finish with deep breathing in step 1.

Spend at least 30mins repeating the steps outlined above and do this at least twice a day.

TOP TIPS

- Avoid sleeping on the affected side and monitor if altering sleep pattern affects how the area drains.
- Exercise regularly to engage and encourage muscle contraction. 'Pectoral' exercises (e.g. pushing hands together) can help reduce swelling (10 repetitions at least twice daily).
- Massagers such as Lymph Ball's, jade rollers, dry brushes can be purchased to assist with your massage.
- Stop if the skin becomes red, hot and more swollen. Infection may be present and you should seek to see your GP ASAP.
