Eating, drinking and swallowing difficulties in Dementia

Eating, drinking and swallowing difficulties in Dementia

Some people with dementia have difficulties eating, drinking and swallowing.

Here are some common problems:

- Not recognising food, drinks or cutlery
- Holding food in the mouth (pouching)
- Spitting out lumps
- Eating too quickly / slowly
- Putting too much in the mouth
- Refusing food / drink
- Eating small amounts / poor appetite
- Talking with food or drink in the mouth
- Forgetting to swallow
- Difficulty swallowing tablets (consult GP/Pharmacist)
- Drooling (consult GP/Pharmacist if excessive)

Warning signs can include:

- Difficulty chewing / moving food in the mouth
- Wet or gurgly voice after swallowing
- Coughing during/after eating / drinking
- Chestiness or lots of chest infections
- Weight loss
- Eating things that are not food (known as "PICA")

Leaflet No: cssl0019 v1 review date 11/27 page 1 of 3

Changes to the texture of food or fluids should only be made with professional advice.

If you have concerns about a patient's ability to swallow, contact the Speech and Language Therapy service or GP.

Before eating or drinking check

- The person is alert
- They are sitting as upright as possible and stay upright for 30 minutes after finishing
- They are wearing their glasses and hearing aids (if used)
- They have good fitting dentures (if used)
- They have a clean mouth "Oral hygiene" (mouth and dentures should be cleaned at least twice a day)
- If they need the toilet
- The food and drink is the right temperature
- What they like and dislike with family / carers / friends

How you can help with eating and drinking

- Sit facing the person or slightly to their 'good' side
- Make eye contact
- Use a gentle tone of voice
- Be calm never rush the person
- Try helping with the first mouthful, then encourage the person to feed themselves
- Try adaptive equipment (consult Occupational Therapy)
- Remind the person what they are eating and chat about the food
- Give swallow reminders if the person holds food in their mouth, prompt them or gesture chewing and swallowing
- Try offering an empty spoon between mouthfuls to encourage a swallow
- Allow time for more than one swallow per mouthful
- Don't give the next mouthful until they have an empty mouth

Don't use straws or spouted beakers or other cups that encourage a person to tip their head back

- If a person is spitting out try smoother, softer foods
- Try sour flavours / cold food and drink which may help to get a swallow
- Try "finger foods" (of the recommended texture) so the person can eat without help
- Help, don't force
- Make sure all staff are trained and feel confident about helping with eating and drinking
- Cut food into small pieces (do this away from the person's view)
- Lay the table with tablecloth so the person can see things easily (contrasting colours can help)
- Never mix the food on the plate keep things separate. Try moulds to shape food (if available)
- Put one course at a time in front of the person. Leave other courses until they are ready
- If the person is cramming food into their mouth, gently encourage them to pause
