

Teledermatology

Easy Read

Teledermatology is having some photographs of your skin, for the Doctor to look at.

Coming to the department

You are having photos of your skin because your Doctor sent you

Go to the reception desk

They will ask you to go to the waiting area

You may have to wait 10 minutes.
You can bring someone with you

A photographer will call your name

Getting ready for the photograph

A photographer is a person who takes pictures

The photographer will take you into another room with lights and cameras

They will ask you when you were born

You may need to take off your watch and jewellery

For some photographs you may need to take off some clothes

Taking your photograph

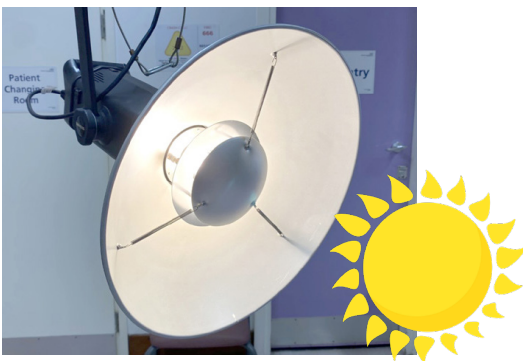

The photographer will make sure you do not feel uncomfortable while they take some photographs

Taking your photos may last around 10 minutes

The photographer will ask you to stand up or sit on a chair

The lights are bright and can feel warm when you are near them

The lights are noisy when they flash

The photographer may have to get close to you to take the photograph

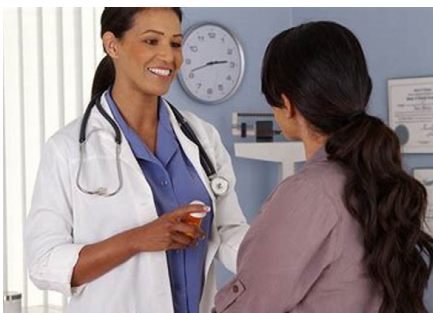

The camera will touch your skin. This will not hurt

You need to keep as still as you can. This is to get better photographs

When the photos are finished the photographer will tell you when you can go

You will get the results as a letter or phone call
