Advice for parents whose child has had minor surgery

Pain

After minor surgery your child is likely to suffer a little discomfort although a local anaesthetic may be given in theatre and this will help to relieve the pain.

Preventing pain occurring is easier than relieving it once pain has started.

Vomiting

Vomiting is common following a general anaesthetic. Some children may have to stay in hospital due to vomiting. If your child is sick at home, let them have small amounts of weak juice or water. If vomiting persists, please contact your GP or the hospital.

Care of the wound

Advice will be offered to you by your nurse before you go home. Generally there will be a light dressing or no dressing at all. Your child may have stitches. Most stitches used are dissolvable but your nurse will advise you before your child's discharge. Some wounds may have steri-strips (paper stitches) on the skin surface – keep the dressed wound dry for 3-4 days and then bathe as normal. Allow the dressings to soak off naturally.

If the wound site appears red, inflamed, oozing or bleeding, please contact the hospital or your GP.

School

Anaesthetics can wear off slowly making your child feel dizzy for short periods.

Your child should be observed carefully at home for the first day. If he / she is comfortable, they should be able to return to school the following Monday. Activities and sports should be restricted according to the surgeon's advice.

Follow-up

An appointment will be made for your child and will either be given to you or sent on in the post. You can visit your practice nurse to have the wound checked if you are unsure.
